

Don't Eat Rare Meat

Would you slaughter the rare, rainbow infused, unicorn just wasted your money, became sick and fat.

The unicorn's natural habitat is marshmellow land, go there to admire the majestic creatures and don't go there to sap the rainbows and sunshine from the native creatures. Would you eat something you know is rare (not cooked well).

Eat something that has no rainbows and made of pure evil but still tasty. Try dragon meat, the tender juicy thighs of a dragon. Drop a slab of dragon meat on the barbeque as a substitute for unicorn meat.

Rumours going around are based on the untrue fact that eating unicorn meat gives you powers like flying and night vision; this is not true! You will not have extreme powers you will be fat and not be able to do anything.

How could you let these majestic unicorns to be pulverise and stuffed into cans and then think they give you powers when cows have been around for more than 500 years? Trust cows.